NORTH CAROLINA STATE UNIVERSITY
NAVAL RESERVE OFFICER'S TRAINING CORPS

NC STATE NROTC

Technical Focus:

When you come to NC State, you'll be part of a university that is nationally and internationally ranked for its academic programs and research opportunities. You'll join a learning community that is as intellectually rigorous as it is personally and culturally enriching.

- 2nd best value among the nation's public colleges and universities (Princeton Review, 2006)
- 5th in Best Overall University Value among public universities (U.S. News & World Report, August 2006)
- 12th best value among the nation's colleges and universities (Kiplinger's Personal Finance, 2007)
- Among the 25 Most Connected Campuses in the nation (Princeton Review, 2006)

Unparalleled School Support:

NC State has had a relationship with Reserve Officer Training Corps since 1894! The University Chancellor shows his support by attending every Commissioning ceremony. Memorial Belltower, the school's most hallowed monument, was built as a tribute to fallen WWI Alumni, and is inscribed with their names.

Flagship Battalion:

We are the largest NROTC Unit in North Carolina, and a Flagship for the Southeast. Your professional development will be led by top-notch officers and NCOs and supported by active duty enlisted students fresh from the Fleet

Life as an NC State Midshipman:

The NC State Wolfpack Battalion requires commitment but does not limit an individual from any extracurricular activities. NROTC wants to provide well-rounded men and women as officers in the Navy and Marine Corps and encourages each Midshipman to become involved in campus activities. We have had varsity athletes, band members, and fraternity presidents in our Battalion.

ROTC Courses:

Naval Science courses are required for all Midshipmen each semester. These courses teach military fundamentals, leadership, and basic skills that are necessary to becoming a Naval Officer.

Weekly Lab:

Each week, the entire Battalion meets in a "laboratory" setting with instruction ranging from drill to battle studies to mission briefs.

Academics:

The main focus of the Wolfpack Battalion is academic excellence. To that end, your advisors, your instructors, and your Senior Midshipmen will help you establish a strong academic foundation while adjusting to life in the Battalion. Calculus and Physics tutors are offered at no charge three nights a week.

Physical Training (PT):

There are PT sessions each week during the fall and spring semesters. Activities at these sessions range from formation runs to calisthenics to flag football games.

The goal of these sessions is to instill a lifestyle that values physical fitness and builds small unit leadership.

Opportunities Available Within the Battalion:

Color Guard:

The Color Guard is a disciplined group of Midshipmen who march out with the American flag at NC State football and basketball games.

NCSU Drill Team:

Members of the drill team practice throughout the year to compete in the annual Mardi Gras Drill Competition at Tulane University in New Orleans, Louisiana.

Events for this competition include exhibition, color guard, and platoon basic drill.
